Salesian Province of Mary Help of Christians, Guwahati, Assam, India

SM-09/2025

1 FEBRUARY 2025

Dear Confreres,

Let me extend to each one of you cordial greetings and wishes as we have embarked on the Jubilee Year 2025 with the theme: “Pilgrims of Hope”, about which I have written already. Now I wish to reflect with you on some of the events of great significance for the Salesian Congregation and the whole Church.

GENERAL CHAPTER 29

During this month the Congregation will commence the 29th General Chapter on the theme “Passionate about Jesus Christ, dedicated to young people”. The choice of Valdocco, Turin, as the venue for the General Chapter holds much significance as it expresses the Congregation’s deep desire to reconnect with the roots of Salesian history and charism. The GC29 which scheduled to be held from February 16 to April 12, 2025, will reflect on the fidelity and prophecy of the Salesian vocation in our contemporary context. The event will also mark the 200th anniversary of Don Bosco’s dream at the age of nine, which inspired his lifelong mission in favour of young people.

Together with the Salesian communities around the world, we are praying for the General Chapter event. The Provinces, including ours, have conducted the Provincial Chapters in preparation of the GC29. These and the ongoing studies and reflections on the Chapter theme have created an atmosphere of spiritual communion that embraces the entire Congregation.

The Moderator of GC29, Fr Alphonse Owoudou, with his team, have been working hard to ensure that the Chapter becomes a moment of grace and renewal for the whole Congregation. Elaborate plans are made for reporting, translations, also for sharing information on the Chapter with everyone concerned through the various tools of communication. The seven-week Chapter will begin with a three-day spiritual retreat led by Fr Pascual Chavez, Rector Major Emeritus, and will have its conclusion in Rome in the context of the Jubilee.

The GC29 is a journey that involves the entire Congregation in a process of reflection and renewal, which requires an intensification of prayer. Former Rector Major, Ángel Fernández Artíme, in his letter convoking GC 29, stressed the importance of prayer. He said, “Without prayer, without a heart that continually matures in faith, all we can do are sociological things that will end almost before they begin. Only in faith does God have the power to make all things new.”

The Chapter will follow the three-stage methodology of reflection – Listening, Interpreting, and Choosing -suggested by Pope Francis for the 2018 Youth Synod. It will emphasize the need for Salesians to deepen their spiritual life and formation. Discernment plays a central role in the Chapter. The Chapter members will, through a process of discernment, elect the Rector Major and the General Council.

As we come close to commencement of the GC29, let us follow this important event with keen interest. Let us intensify our prayer seeking the help of the Holy Spirit to guide the Salesian Congregation on the path of fidelity to the charism of Don Bosco so that we as individuals and communities and a Congregation with a vast global reach, continue to remain open to the challenges of our time, to become signs and bearers of God's love for the young people. I invite our communities and confreres to follow these moments in a spirit of prayer and solidarity. Let us also share information about the GC with the members of the Salesian Family and the youth. Let us pray to Our Blessed Mother, Mary Help of Christians, to whom our Province is dedicated, to help us discover the richness of the Salesian charism and legacy we have received.

THE DAY OF CONSECRATED LIFE

The Day of Consecrated Life, instituted by Pope John Paul II in 1997, is celebrated on February 2nd as a special occasion in the Church to honour the contribution and commitment of those living a consecrated life and to reflect on this beautiful vocation. The day aims to recognise with gratitude the gift of consecrated life as a special vocation and charism in the Church, calling for fidelity to live the Gospel and the evangelical counsels intensely. This day marks the Feast of the Presentation of the Lord in the Temple, and the recognition of Christ as the light of the world.

The vocation and mission of religious and consecrated life in the Church are integral to its identity, witness and service to the world. Through their commitment to prayer, community life, and various forms of ministry, those in consecrated life witness to the love of Christ and contribute to the building up of the Church. In a world often marked by division and materialism, their lives stand as an eschatological sign and a testament to the power of God's grace and the enduring call to holiness.

The vocation of consecrated life is characterized by a deep and personal call from God to live a life of holiness. This calling is discerned through prayer and spiritual guidance and involves making public vows of poverty, chastity, and obedience. These vows are a radical expression of our dedication to God and the Church, reflecting a desire to live in closer imitation of Christ.

Pope John Paul II convened a synod on the consecrated life and wrote the Apostolic Exhortation Vita Consecrata, to remind all the faithful of what consecrated life means, not just for the religious who are consecrated men and women, but also to make everyone understand consecrated life as a gift to the whole Church. In Vita Consecrata he described consecrated life as "a life deeply rooted in the example and teaching of Christ the Lord, and a gift of God the Father to his Church through the Holy Spirit." The consecrated life is at the heart of the Church. As Pope John Paul II emphasised, "Its universal presence and the evangelical nature of its witness are clear evidence that the consecrated life is not something isolated and marginal, but a reality which affects the whole Church."

CONSECRATED LIFE- A GIFT

The consecrated life,in the words of John Paul II, is primarily a gift. This is a special gift to the Church because it is a “life which has not only proved a help and support for the Church in the past but is also a precious and necessary gift for the present and future of the People of God, since it is an intimate part of her life, her holiness and her mission.”

Jesus reminds us that our call is not a choice made by us but result of his gracious favour and grace: “You did not choose me, but I chose you and appointed you to go forth and bear fruit” (Jn 15:16). Religious life is a gift of inestimable value because of its uniqueness; indeed, it is a treasure that enriches the Church. Thus, by its various charisms and apostolates, the kingdom of God is made alive, visible and present in our world today. Just as Jesus was offered in the temple, the consecrated life is celebrated by the Church as the self-giving of a consecrated person. The faithful too share in this self-giving by virtue of their baptism.

On the day of Consecrated Life, we pray especially for the men and women who have said ‘Yes’ to the Lord. It is, at the same time, a universal feast of the Church and therefore, the whole Church celebrates the day. This feast celebrates the gift of God to the Church through charisms, apostolates, and pastoral activities in education, health, promotion of justice and peace and the integrity of creation, and many other forms of ministries in the Church, all for the sake of the proclamation of God’s Kingdom.

Since consecrated life is a gift to the Church, the celebration of the day can enable the faithful to understand deeply what this gift entails and how the Church is enriched by their presence. The laity are also obliged to pray for those who have dedicated themselves to God and become aware of the need for more labourers in the vineyard. They can contribute to promote vocations and support their formation and vocational maturation.

JESUS - THE MODEL

The consecrated persons through the profession of the evangelical counsels, as exemplified in the life of Jesus – the chaste, poor and obedient – make “visible” in the midst of the world the values of the Gospel. Their lives are directed towards the mystery of the Kingdom of God already at work in history, even as it awaits its full realisation in heaven” (Vita Consecrata 1).

Consecrated life starts with looking at Jesus, recognising him, falling in love. When this happens, then our perspective changes and suddenly all things become an opportunity for a deeper understanding of God. We begin to see Jesus in the ordinariness of our lives, in our work, our encounter with people, the challenges we face, our moments of silence and prayer. This encounter happens for most of us not in any extraordinary way, but in the ordinary events of our daily life. Pope Francis said: “Men and women religious, who live to imitate Jesus, are called to bring their own gaze into the world, a gaze of compassion, a gaze that goes in search of those far off; a gaze that does not condemn, but encourages, frees, consoles; a gaze of compassion.”

A UNIQUE EXPERIENCE OF GRACE

Consecrated life in the Church is not a uniform thing where those who are called are formed in the same mould or act in the same way. There are varieties of gifts and talents which God gives to individuals and institutions. Each person is unique – with one's talents and gifts, as well as fragilities and weaknesses, socio-cultural and family backgrounds and interests. Being a gift, the religious vocation of the individuals as well as the charisms of various Congregations, are different and diverse. It is the Holy Spirit who gives these charisms and provides the strength to live it. Those who have been called accept this call of God humbly and respond to it through their whole-hearted 'yes'.

Pope Francis, who is himself a religious, reflecting on the Feast of the Lord's Presentation and the witness of Simeon and Anna, Joseph and Mary, urges us: "Let us thank God for the gift of life, and ask for a new way of looking that knows how to see grace, how to look out for one's neighbour, how to hope. Then our eyes too will see salvation."

A CALL TO BE SHINING LIGHTS

The feast of the Presentation of the Lord is a celebration of Christ's manifestation as the light of the world. The consecrated persons are also called to become shining lights, manifesting the immense love God has for his people. The Religious vocation is a call to hold out the light of Christ as witnesses of the Gospel.

Consecrated life has found various expressions within the Church's history. In response to the call to live their baptism and Christian vocation more intensely, men and women, at all times have responded to the call of God and dedicated themselves to him. The Holy Spirit has raised up in the Church founders with gifts and charisms to serve the Lord through a life of contemplation or active ministry. Individuals embracing religious life undergo a transformation, setting aside personal goals and ambitions in order to fully dedicate themselves to the Lord. This vocation is a profound spiritual journey characterized by a total self-giving. Community life is an integral dimension of the life of the religious, who seek holiness of life within the charism of one's founder. In an ever-evolving world, the consecrated life remains a beacon of faith, hope, and love, inspiring people to seek deeper union with God and dedicated service to humanity.

The journey toward a religious vocation often involves discernment, various phases of formation, and life in common. Their work transcends mere service and embodies a spiritual mission to be agents of transformation and hope, a shining light of the Gospel.

CHALLENGES AND RESPONSES

The path of consecrated life is not without its challenges. Contemporary society's shifting values, the decline in religious vocations, the lack of stability in marriage, and the pressures that affect the family, as well as the demands of modern living pose challenges to respond to the call to embrace consecrated life as a vocation. Many young people are afraid or hesitant to take a decisive step to respond to the Lord's call. However, the Church continues to advocate for the renewal and revitalization of consecrated life and offer support and encouragement. Pope John Paul II frequently encouraged young people to follow the Lord's loving invitation by reminding them of the words of Jesus, "do not be afraid".

The many challenges also present opportunities for renewal and creativity of consecrated life. We trust that the Holy Spirit will raise up in the Church individuals with fresh enthusiasm and motivation and groups with new gifts and charisms to follow the path of holiness and grace. As Salesians, besides living our consecrated life in fidelity to the charism of Don Bosco, we need to help young people to discern the Lord's call. We must do everything possible to help those whom God has called to persevere in their vocation. We also need to make our communities places of living consecrated life with joy and serenity.

Our communities must be open to newer forms of ministries to address contemporary needs of young people who are poor and need our assistance. We place ourselves under the guidance of the Spirit who renews and strengthens us in our vocation. We need to recognise and appreciate the uniqueness and diversity of our Salesian vocation and charism. Don Bosco knew how to discern the talents and gifts of his Salesians, many of whom were his own pupils. He was able to make them collaborators in his mission for the young people, especially of teaching and forming them and ultimately leading them to God.

Our Constitutions tell us about the importance of accepting our confreres whom God has called. Living in community as brothers is one of the hallmarks of our vocation. We work in community as the Salesian mission is entrusted to the whole community. Don Bosco insisted on the Family Spirit that should become the badge of our identity. We live this spirit by living and working together, sharing our passion for God and his people, using our varied gifts at the service of the mission. When we do so, we certainly experience the joy of living and the desire for holiness. Vocations too flourish in such an environment.

We may not become famous or recognised for any outstanding achievements. But each one of us can discover our true identity, our vocation in our daily encounter with God, with Jesus in the Eucharist, and in the apostolate that we carry out in communities with humility, zeal and dedication.

CONCLUSION

In the feast of the Presentation and the day of Consecrated Life, we recall the encounter of Mary and Joseph with Simeon and Anna as they bring their little boy to be presented to God. That encounter is like a theophany and God blesses all of them; they receive a glimpse of God's salvation. We too are called to receive the grace of God and in turn become a blessing to those whom the Lord has entrusted to our pastoral care.
